“Chloe continues to dazzle the world with her delicious vegan creations.”

—Angela Liddon,
author of The Oh She Glows Cookbook

Chloe Flavor

Saucy, Crispy, Spicy, Vegan

CHLOE COSCARELLI

FOREWORD BY LIZ AND MICHAEL SYMON

The celebrated vegan chef makes her highly anticipated return to the cookbook world with 125 original recipes that focus on simplicity in the steps and big flavor in the food.

Chloe Coscarelli believes the most delicious dishes come from plant-based ingredients, and has debunked the myth that vegan cooking is bland and visually unenticing. Enter Chloe Flavor. Every recipe here is bold in taste, loud in color, unabashedly unique, and, above all, easy to make. With dishes like Smoky Grits & Greens, Mango-Guacamole Crunch Burgers, and Sea-Salted Chocolate-Chunk Cookies, this food is for fun, friends, and family—and it’s all about the flavor. Vegans will delight in Chloe’s mouthwatering creations, and carnivores won’t miss the meat one bit.

First breaking onto the culinary scene as the only vegan chef to capture the top prize on Food Network’s Cupcake Wars, Chef CHLOE COSCARELLI has since been recognized for bringing vegan cuisine to the mainstream as an award-winning chef, successful entrepreneur, and bestselling cookbook author.

ROASTED ASPARAGUS WITH YUMMY SAUCE

I PLANTED ASPARAGUS IN MY SEVENTH year of living in our home, and I ate my first spear in the tenth. It took me that long, because I needed to learn that my garden space and energy should be devoted to the foods I really wanted to eat and couldn't get for cheap. When organic local asparagus peaked at $8.99 a pound, I knew it was time. Roasting is far and above my favorite way to cook asparagus. The insides steam and the outsides caramelize, and there are few more beautiful things to me than a baking sheet holding a chosen line of asparagus spears. They really don't need sauce, but a great sauce can't hurt, and yummy sauce might be the greatest I know. It made its first appearance with salmon in my book The Homemade Kitchen, but I just had to bring it back. The cheese, ferment-y richness of nutritional yeast blends into a sauce with a flavor that everyone wants more of, yet no one can guess the main ingredient. Use it on sweet potatoes, squash, or green beans, too.

If you're buying asparagus at the supermarket, pay attention to the heads. If they've begun to open, or the feathered top is slimy, look for another bunch. Always wash asparagus well, as grit tends to hide in the feathered layers of each tip.

- SERVES 4
- 1 teaspoon olive oil, plus more for greasing the baking sheet
 - 1 pound asparagus
 - ¼ teaspoon kosher salt
 - 2 tablespoons unsalted butter
 - 1½ teaspoons finely minced garlic (1 to 2 cloves)
 - 1 tablespoon nutritional yeast
 - 1½ teaspoons tamari or soy sauce
1. Preheat the oven to 425°F. Generously grease a baking sheet with olive oil.
 2. Break the end of each asparagus stalk where it snaps naturally. (Compost the ends or save them for stock or asparagus soup.) Make sure the stalks are as dry as possible. Lay the stalks out on the baking sheet, and drizzle them with 1 teaspoon of olive oil. Sprinkle with the salt. Roast until the tips color, 10 to 12 minutes, shaking the pan halfway through roasting to turn the spears. Transfer the asparagus to a platter.
 3. While the asparagus roasts, make the sauce. Combine the butter, garlic, nutritional yeast, and tamari in your smallest saucepan over medium heat. Cook, stirring often, until the mixture comes together and thickens up into a sauce, 3 to 5 minutes. If it doesn't come together, add about a tablespoon of water and stir to combine. Pour the sauce over the asparagus or serve it on the side for dipping.

Eating from the Ground Up

Recipes for Simple, Perfect Vegetables

ALANA CHERNILA

Although there are countless ways to eat vegetables, there are a few perfect ways to make each vegetable sing.

With more than 100 versatile recipes, Eating from the Ground Up teaches you how to showcase the unique flavor and texture of each vegetable, truly bringing out the best in every root and leaf. Alana Chernila demonstrates how smart techniques and a light touch are the way to go when beautiful vegetables are just good and fresh. There are dishes that are so simple and quick that they feel more intuitive than following a typical recipe; pots of soup for all times of the year that are packed with nourishment; ideas for maximizing summer produce, even when the volume is overwhelming for those who garden themselves; cozy, hearty fall and winter foods that are all about comfort; and impressive celebratory dishes fit for a party. No matter the vegetable, the central lesson is: don't mess with a good thing.

INTRODUCTION

WHO I AM, AND HOW WE CAN CHANGE YOUR HEALTH (AND THE WORLD)

The Secret Service hates it when you run in the White House. Sudden movement isn't exactly their thing. But the agents stationed inside 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue soon got used to the sight of me sprinting down the corridors, past portraits of Roosevelt and Reagan and toward the kitchen. I can't count the times that I was scheduled in some important meeting and glanced at my watch, only to realize it was almost 6 p.m., and I had just half an hour to get dinner on the table for a family of four, including a man who didn't have exactly hours time to wait. Despite his busy schedule, President Obama almost always made it back to The Residence by 6:50 p.m. to eat with Michelle and their two girls. It was an inspiring sight—the busiest man in the world carving out time for this daily ritual. I'd recover myself from the meeting and just start looking it through the West Wing.

At the White House, I had two jobs: to work on food and nutrition policy, and to cook dinner for the President and his family. I spent an hour or so a day working to provide nutritious, delicious food for The First Family, and spent most of my waking hours working to help do the same for families around the country.

A job at the White House comes with no blueprints. The learning curve is steep for anyone, and especially for a guy who hadn't spent a day in politics. Before I came to the White House, I was a cook moonlighting as a food-policy geek. But I quickly became a food-policy guy who knew how to cook. I traded chef whites for suits and swanky restaurant kitchens for the conference rooms in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building (or the EEOB, one of the thousands of mind-numbing acronyms you learn when working in government). Instead of snoring fish against hot iron, I was attending meetings with the First Lady, senior staffers, public health experts, and economists. And with the First Lady leading the charge, we launched the biggest public health campaign to come out of the White House in American history.

But this book isn't the story of that campaign—not exactly. It's about the lessons I learned fighting for change in D.C. that can change the way you eat at home. It's about learning the little choices that add up to make you and the planet healthier and happier—and your dinners more delicious—not stressing about the big life-changing choices that just aren't realistic. It's about how to stop worrying about eating “right,” eating “perfectly,” and just start eating a little better.

A decade before I fell into politics, I was a college kid who fell in love with the culture of the restaurant kitchen. Then a screw-up sauce sent me down a new path.

“To improve our health and help save our planet, we don't have to eat ‘healthy.’ We don't have to eat sustainably. We don't have to eat ‘right.’ But we do have to eat a little better.”

Eat a Little Better

SAM KASS

Sam Kass, former chef to the Obamas and White House food policy advisor, makes it easier to do a little better for your diet—and the environment—every day.

Going organic and local all the time just isn't realistic for most people, and that's okay—it's all about doing a little better, and how those choices add up to big change. This is the philosophy Kass helped the Obamas instill in their home, both in Chicago and that big white one in Washington. Through 90 delicious, simple recipes and smart ways to shop and set up your kitchen so the healthy stuff comes to hand most naturally, this book lays out Kass's plan to eat a little better. Sustainability and healthfulness come most easily when the choices are appealing and habit-forming, not drastic. And so Kass shares ways to help make it simple to choose, cook, and eat delicious foods without depriving yourself of pleasure.

SAM KASS was a chef, a senior policy advisor for nutrition in the Obama Administration and is now a consultant to several food technology start-ups. As the executive director of Michelle Obama's Let's Move initiative, Kass helped her create the first vegetable garden at the White House since Eleanor Roosevelt's Victory Garden. He is a graduate of the University of Chicago and was trained by Chef Christian Domschitz, in Vienna.

1 cup Szechuan Chile Sauce (page 100)
 ½ cup blueberry jam, homemade (see page 100) or store-bought
 1 to 2 pound skin-on salmon fillet, any pin bones removed
 Canola oil
 Salt and pepper
 ½ cup torn fresh basil leaves
 ½ cup torn fresh mint leaves

I'm not going to be that chef who's all in your grill about using only produce or animal products that you grow or raise yourself on your own fancy biodynamic farm. But as I said before, there are some times when buying good quality makes all the difference. Salmon is one of those things: not all salmon is created equal. That sad, pale stuff at the grocery store? That's giving salmon a bad name. High-quality, wild-caught salmon—like Copper River sockeye when it's in season—is the way salmon should be: bright orange and meaty, not slimy, pale, or fishy. And the skin is super-tasty, too. I love showcasing this beautiful fish by taking a big hunk, throwing it on the grill, and serving it with Szechuan Chile Sauce plus a secret ingredient: blueberry jam. I know it might sound weird to put jam in your chile sauce, but trust me on this. The fruit brings together all the flavors of this dish with its subtle acidity and sweetness. Finish off this dish with a batch of grill veggies and you've got a meal. Serves 4 to 6

GRILLED SALMON
 WITH BLUEBERRY-SZECHUAN CHILE SAUCE

Preheat a grill or grill pan so it's nice and hot. To grill the fish without its falling apart, the grill grates need to heat for at least 15 minutes before you start cooking.

Whisk together the chile sauce and blueberry jam.

Lightly coat both sides of the salmon with the oil and season with salt. Gently put the fish on the grill, skin side down. Cook until the skin crisps, 5 to 7 minutes, then use a long-handled metal spatula to gently scrape the skin free of the grates before flipping. Releasing the skin will help the entire fillet to flip without breaking. Carefully flip the fish and continue cooking on the flesh side until medium to medium rare, 1 to 2 more minutes. Transfer the salmon to a platter, skin side down.

Drizzle the fish with a healthy amount of the sauce, and garnish with the herbs. Serve family style.

VERSION OF THE ORIGINAL.

Having previously lived year-round in New York City, our first season on the East End of Long Island marked a dramatic shift in our lives. Whereas we once hopped on the subway, hustling from Brooklyn to Manhattan, we now took bike rides through hidden pockets of our quiet town, stopping to collect rocks, hunt for clams, and spontaneously build forts out of sun-drenched driftwood. We discovered surfing—particularly my son, who was both smitten with the sport and embraced by its community. Our days were long and languid, often spent on the beach with friends, from morning until sunset.

It was an entirely new way of life, and besides deepening my family's relationship to nature and to each other, it also completely changed the way I approached summer cooking. From food purchase to preparation to plating, every aspect of the process just seemed to relax and take on the arms-wide-open quality.

Spiralize, Chop, Rice, and Mash Your Vegetables into Creative, Craveable Meals

ALI MAFFUCCI

Spiralizing sensation Ali Maffucci is back with more creative ways to eat vegetables than ever before—30 percent spiralized, 70 percent brand-new innovation for more carb and meat replacements.

Ali Maffucci takes common, easy-to-find vegetables and helps them shine as the focus of flavorful, healthy meals in ingenious new ways. For the first time, she looks past veggie noodles, showing other ways to incorporate produce into meals. Sweet potato slabs replace toast, cauliflower becomes pizza crust, broccoli turns into tots, avocado gets mounded, jackfruit mimics pulled meat—and that’s just the beginning. Readers will delight in dishes like Cauliflower Steaks with Chimichurri and Corn Succotash, Sweet Potato Waffle Grilled Cheese, and Ginger Granola Pear Oatmeal Bars. Inspiralize and Beyond is perfect for anyone looking for veggie-forward alternatives to carbs and meats without sacrificing flavor and texture.

Combining her deep-rooted love for pasta with her desire for a healthy lifestyle, ALI MAFFUCCI launched Inspiralized.com, the only blog dedicated to cooking creatively and nutritiously with the spiralizer. She is also the New York Times bestselling author of Inspiralized and Inspiralize Everything. She lives in Jersey City, New Jersey, with her husband, Lu.

A Table in Venice

Recipes from My Home

SKYE McALPINE

With irresistible recipes, gorgeous photographs, and evocative essays, A Table in Venice brings the beauty of this storied city and its cuisine into homes everywhere.

Traveling by gondola, splashing through streets that flood when the tide is high, enjoying creamy risi e bisi (Venetian-style rice and peas) for lunch—this is everyday life in Venice. To find the true heart of this fabled city, to experience local, authentic fare, you need the right guide. Blogger Skye McAlpine has lived in Venice for most of her life; her family moved there from London when she was six years old. Since then she has immersed herself in the city’s culinary culture, where the daily rhythms are established by markets, mealtimes, and afternoon spritzes, learning from neighbors and friends how to cook the Venetian way. McAlpine takes readers to this city to share in cooking traditional dishes as well as her take on classics. The stunning photography and beautiful storytelling will bring this lovely city to life as never before.

SKYE McALPINE is the creator of From My Dining Table, a blog in which she writes about living and cooking in Venice. She and her blog have been featured in Food & Wine, The Guardian, The Huffington Post, Vogue Living, Food52, The Kitchn, and Cup of Jo. She lives in Venice with her husband and their son.

THREE KINDS OF RAVIOLI

THE RAVIOLI

6 large eggs, plus 1 for gluing the pasta sheets
 4 ½ cups / 600g type “00” flour
 A generous pinch of salt
 The filling of your choice (recipes follow)

Homemade pasta is something for special occasions, or for those days when it feels like you have all the time in the world. It is no better than dried pasta, just different, a different mood for a different day. And one that I tend to associate with cozy winter Sundays.

Ravioli are mainly about the filling. And here I have given you a recipe with four different fillings, one for each season—though there is, of course, nothing to stop you from enjoying plate of ravioli with speck and mushroom in the summer or ravioli with light lemon and ricotta filling on a bright winter’s day.

Four the flour onto a clean work surface. Pile it up high like a volcano, then make a crater in the center, and crack the eggs into it. Use your fingertips to break up the egg yolks and mix them, little by little, into the flour until you have a rough, floury dough. Knead the dough vigorously for about 10 minutes, until it begins to feel lively and smooth in your hands. The key to making good pasta is to knead the dough well, which allows the gluten in the flour to develop so that the pasta will hold its shape nicely and stay al dente when cooked (otherwise it will turn to mush). Roll the dough into a ball, wrap it in clingfilm, and set it to rest in the fridge for at least 30 minutes.

While the dough is resting, make your filling.

On a generously floured surface, roll out the pasta using a rolling pin until the dough is thin enough to fit into the pasta machine. Roll the pasta through each setting on the machine until it’s the thinnest it can be.

Crack the last egg into a small bowl, beat lightly with a fork and set to one side. Cut the pasta sheet into two equally sized halves. On one sheet spoon a teaspoon of filling every 8 to 10cm, then use a pastry brush to paint around each mound of filling with the egg wash. Drape the second sheet of pasta over the first one, like a blanket. Then gently press down around each mound of filling with your fingers to seal the ravioli, taking care to press out any air bubbles, as they will cause the pasta to burst when it cooks. Trim each ravioli with a sharp knife or a ravioli cutter, then gently transfer them to a lightly floured baking tray. When you have made all the ravioli, cover the tray with clingfilm and refrigerate until you are ready to cook the pasta.

Fill a large saucepan with water, salt generously and bring to the boil. Once the water begins to gloop, drop the ravioli into the water, stir gently and wait for them to float to the surface, 1 to 2 minutes. Use a slotted spoon to fish the ravioli pieces out into a bowl, then drizzle with olive oil or a little melted butter before serving, or serve with the sauces included with the filling recipes that follow.

flank steak

WITH ROASTED GRAPES AND MUSHROOMS

A classic pairing in Northern Italy is mushrooms with raisins, so I decided to turn it into a mushroom crostini and then add grapes. Later for a dinner party I wanted to make a beef dish and change it up a bit so I took the bruschetta topping and put it on a flank steak. People loved it!

Heat 1 tablespoon of olive oil in a large ovenproof skillet over high heat. Season the flank steak evenly on both sides with 1/2 teaspoon of the salt. Place the steak in the pan and allow to cook, undisturbed for 5 minutes until deep golden brown. Using tongs, flip the steak to sear the other side and continue to cook for an additional 3 minutes. Transfer the steak to a baking sheet and roast for 10 to 12 minutes or until an instant-read thermometer inserted in the thickest part reads 125 degrees. Remove the steak to a cutting board to rest for at least 10 minutes.

While the steak cooks, add the remaining 2 tablespoons olive oil to the pan and place over medium-high heat. Add the mushrooms to the pan and season with 1/2 teaspoon kosher salt. Cook, stirring occasionally with a wooden spoon, for about 8 minutes or until deep golden brown on all sides. Add the shallots and the remaining salt and cook an additional 2 minutes, stirring often. Deglaze with the sherry and allow the sherry to cook down until reduced by 1/2, about 2 to 3 minutes. Add the beef stock and the thyme and cook an additional 2 minutes. Add the butter and swirl the pan while stirring with the wooden spoon to emulsify the sauce. Remove from the heat.

Slice the steak into 1/2-inch pieces. Fan the steak on a platter and spoon the mushrooms over the sliced steak. Sprinkle with the arugula and serve.

Sweet Laurel

Recipes for Whole Food,
Grain-Free Desserts

LAUREL GALLUCCI AND CLAIRE THOMAS

From the buzz-worthy bakery in LA comes 85 simple dessert recipes made with only whole food ingredients. Sweet Laurel is perfect for anyone who wants to create sweet treats but who has food allergies or is on a Paleo, grain-free, gluten-free, refined-sugar-free, or dairy-free diet.

A lifelong baker, Laurel Gallucci was diagnosed with an aggressive auto-immune disease and told she would never eat chocolate cake again. But the dessert lover refused to accept that, which led her to discover the beauty of baking with whole food ingredients. Her recipes are grain-free, gluten-free, refined-sugar-free, and dairy-free, but they are not about restriction; rather, Sweet Laurel celebrates enjoyment and indulgence. With desserts like Dark Horse Carrot Cake, Lavender Sandwich Cookies, Everything Bagel Bread, it's hard to believe that each treat is made with 4 to 5 ingredients. Whether looking for a simpler way to bake or struggling with an allergy, readers will make Sweet Laurel their new definitive grain-free baking book.

In 2015, LAUREL GALLUCCI turned her test kitchen into Sweet Laurel Bakery, where she ships out her baked goods to the whole country. Her cakes quickly caught the attention of celebs like Mindy Kaling, Lauren Conrad, and Jessica Alba, and media outlets like Goop, Vogue.com, Mind Body Green, and Today. She founded Sweet Laurel Bakery with CLAIRE THOMAS, who serves as the creative director and photographer of Sweet Laurel. Claire is also the voice behind the blog The Kitchy Kitchen.

EGGPLANT TACOS WITH PICO DE GALLO

Makes 8 tacos

For the pico de gallo
 1 pound tomatoes (2 large or 4 medium)
 ½ cup finely diced white onion
 1 large jalapeño, seeded and finely chopped

2 tablespoons fresh lime juice, plus lime wedges for serving
 Kosher salt

For the tacos
 2 pounds eggplant, cut lengthwise into ½-inch-thick slices
 ¼ cup extra-virgin olive oil
 Kosher salt and freshly ground pepper
 2 teaspoons ground coriander
 1 teaspoon ground cumin
 8 corn tortillas

The combo of cumin and eggplant tastes especially meaty. This is a great replacement for steak tacos, if you're looking for something filling that is meat-free.

1. MAKE THE PICO DE GALLO: Quarter the tomatoes lengthwise and remove the cores. Use your fingers to scoop out the seeds and discard. Finely chop the tomato flesh and transfer to a medium bowl. Add the onion, jalapeño, and lime juice and toss. Season with salt.

2. PREPARE THE TACOS: Preheat a grill or grill pan to medium-high heat.

3. Arrange the eggplant slices on a baking sheet or platter. Brush one side with half of the olive oil and season with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with half of the coriander and cumin and rub it into the slices. Flip the eggplant and repeat the brushing and seasoning.

4. Grill the eggplant, flipping once, until browned on the outside and tender inside, about 4 minutes per side. Transfer the eggplant to a cutting board and when it's cool enough to handle, slice each piece crosswise into strips.

5. Grill the tortillas until warmed through and pliable, turning, 30 seconds to 1 minute. Wrap in foil or a clean towel to keep warm.

6. Pass the eggplant, pico de gallo, lime wedges, and tortillas at the table.

Great Tastes

Cooking (and Eating) from Morning to Midnight

DANIELLE KOSANN AND LAURA KOSANN
 FOREWORD BY CHRISTINA TOSI

The sisters behind the favorite online magazine take you through “a day in the life of The New Potato,” from green juice to cocktails, along the way sharing 85 original recipes matched with their funniest antics and anecdotes.

Readers have come to love The New Potato for how it presents the world through the lens of food, featuring interviews with celebrities about their favorite meals, restaurants, and recipes. This debut cookbook combines all the best parts of the website, showcasing Danielle and Laura’s most amusing (and often humbling) experiences flirting with the limelight, alongside the dishes they’ve inspired. Have you ever tried to hand Katie Couric homemade peanut butter in a moving vehicle? Has Martha Stewart publicly questioned your stand mixer? With recipes for dishes like Coconut-Quinoa Porridge, Quick Moroccan Beef Stew with Prunes and Chickpeas, and Apple Strudel, this cookbook is for the reader who is busy but still wants to make something good and yummy. After all, celeb or not, we all have one thing in common: we all have to eat!

Sisters DANIELLE AND LAURA KOSANN used their combined experience to create The New Potato, an online magazine full of recipes, restaurant suggestions, celebrity interviews, and other fun content. They actively blur the lines of food, fashion, and media, proving that these industries are not mutually exclusive.

Michael Symon's Playing with Fire

BBQ and More from the Grill, Smoker, and Fireplace

MICHAEL SYMON AND DOUGLAS TRATTNER

Cohost of The Chew and celebrated Iron Chef and restaurateur Michael Symon returns to a favorite subject, meat, with his first barbecue and live-fire cookbook. This will be the new definitive guide to classic American barbecue.

Before opening Mabel's BBQ in Cleveland, Michael Symon traveled from coast to coast, sampling BBQ from the country's best pit masters. Now, readers can re-create some of his favorite discoveries such as Texas-inspired brisket, fireplace leg of lamb, and grilled rib eye steaks with peperonata. Of course you'll also find Michael's signature Cleveland-style barbecue that he developed to showcase the flavors of his hometown, like This Is Cleveland, his "tailgate party on a plate" of kielbasa, smoked ham hocks, and smoked pork loin all braised in beer and served with dumplings. Michael offers expert guidance on working with different styles of grills and smokers, choosing aromatic woods for smoking, and successfully pairing proteins with rubs, sauces, and sides.

SERVES 8 SMOKED CROWN ROAST of Pork

In many cultures, the pig has been a symbol of good luck for ages. As the superstition goes, if you eat pork on New Year's Day, you are guaranteed to have a good and prosperous New Year. If regular pork is good luck, this smoked crown roast is bound to bring great luck for many years to come, because it is so impressive and delicious.

2 tablespoons kosher salt
1 tablespoon freshly ground black pepper
2 tablespoons caraway seeds
1½ teaspoons celery seeds
1 (10- to 12-pound) crown roast of pork

1. Preheat and preheat your smoker to 225°F.
2. In a small bowl, mix to combine the salt, pepper, caraway seeds, and celery seeds. Pat the roast dry with paper towels and season on all sides with the spice mixture.
3. When the temperature in the smoker reaches 225°F and the smoke is running clear, add the meat. Cook until the pork reaches an internal temperature of 190°F, about 2 1/2 hours. For the best results, use a probe thermometer to continually monitor the meat's temperature.
4. Transfer the pork to a cutting board and let rest for 30 minutes. Slice between the bones and serve.

Part Title 25

"Whether it's grilling rib eyes, smoking lamb ribs, baking pizza in a homemade wood-fired oven, or just cooking hot dogs on a stick over a campfire, I have been in love with these primitive forms of food preparation for as long as I can remember."

Ritz & Escoffier

The Hotelier, the Chef, and the Rise of the Leisure Class

LUKE BARR

Full of scandal and opulence, Ritz & Escoffier transports readers to turn-of-the-century London and Paris, where hotelier César Ritz and chef Auguste Escoffier collaborated to spawn the modern luxury hotel and restaurant, signaling a new social order and the rise of the middle class.

In 1889, César Ritz, a Swiss hotelier lauded for his exquisite taste, found himself at the Savoy Hotel in London. He had come at the request of Richard D'Oyly Carte, financier of Gilbert and Sullivan, who was looking to create the world's best hotel. Ritz enlisted Frenchman Auguste Escoffier, a formidable chef de cuisine. Their collaboration was a hotel and restaurant like no one had ever experienced, run in often mysterious and always extravagant ways.

Barr deftly re-creates this thrilling Belle Epoque era in which British aristocracy was at its peak, women began dining out unaccompanied by men, and nouveau riche Americans and gauche industrialists flaunted their wealth. In their collaboration, where they welcomed loyal and sometimes salacious clients, Escoffier established the modern kitchen brigade and codified French cuisine for the ages, and Ritz, whose name still graces the finest hotels worldwide, created the first luxury hotel.

LUKE BARR is the author of the New York Times bestselling Provence, 1970. A San Francisco native, Barr now lives in Brooklyn.
