Seven Stories Press stands in solidarity with the librarians, teachers, parents, kids, and community members who resist the banning of books and ideas. We support freedom of expression and the rights of all people young and old to see themselves reflected in the books they choose to read. Parents have the right to guide their children's reading; they do not have the right to dictate other people's reading or access to information. We believe that exposure to ideas and open discussion is crucial for creating respect for each other and a just society.
