BEACON PRESS

In 2029, Beacon Press will complete 175 years of continuous book publishing. This rare achievement in American publishing is a milestone few houses can claim. Leading up to Beacon Press's septaquinquacentennial—quite the mouthful, we know!—we are reissuing a selection of core titles from our catalog that remain relevant.

As an independent and fiercely progressive publisher, Beacon often brings out books other publishers might be reluctant to touch, both because they are too radical and because they are deemed unlikely to lead to commercial success. These classics, which include works from Viktor Frankl, Karl Polanyi, Mary Daly, Thich Nhat Hanh, Marian Wright Edelman, Herbert Marcuse, and James Baldwin, show how good and important books impact the culture.

We commit to living up to our name and being a beacon, publishing essential books—books that change the conversation, and our lives.

—Gayatri Patnaik, Director
